I'm a shopaholic and almost every month I lose the control on my credits and my credit card debt is getting bigger and bigger. When I try to control the debt, I usually go broke at the end of the month. I need some serious financial management and a debt free life of course. My father had car loans and house loans, I saw him getting out of those in 10 years and he has been so patient with that. This book does some serious help by motivating and giving essential tips to control credit, making a budget and getting out of debts. There are charts to see as examples that explains better. I feel lazy repaying the debts; I know this sounds awful and thus I lose time. This book has a chapter on repaying debts and I really liked it. The chapter "best ways to save money" is literally the best for me. I'm looking forward to utilize the tips I learnt from this book and I recommend this to anyone who is facing troubles exactly like me!

This book is really helpful for someone who wants to learn how to start managing his/her own finances. Personally, I also have trouble managing my own money and often end up spending all my hard earned money and worst I wasn't able to pay some debts (mostly on credit cards). I've been meaning to establish some sort of control or monitoring plan to my spending habits but I don't really have a concrete idea on where to start. Thanks to this book it gave me good ideas on how to jump start my goal to saving more and being free of debt. The book is presented in an easy to understand manner which is one of the reasons why I like it. It's an easy read and a provides helpful information to its readers. Good book for a good price.
