The Bear: The Paha Sapa Saga Book Three, Part Two (Sensual Native American Romance)

Synopsis

Two women, one man—Continue the adventure as Lightning Strike meets two women who will forever change his life. Many of the men in the Kiowa tribe were killed during the terrible Cheyenne attack, leaving behind widows and children with no man to take care of them. Lightning Strike steps up, fulfilling his duty to the tribe by marrying. He asks his sister, Tulip, to find two sisters who are well suited to him, and so the search begins. Passionate Sunflower and sweet Starlight are determined to capture the handsome brave's heart. He's everything their husband wasn't; kind, amusing, and protective. After winning him over, the sisters are happier than they've ever been. However, amid danger, tempers flare causing a rift in their relationship. Stubborn pride and anger threatens their happiness. Can they move past it or will it destroy their marriage?

This is part three of Robin's Paha Sapa Saga. These are three books that you'll want to keep to read many times. Robin's story brings you into the center of her story where the characters become your friends. You just never want to read The End

Though our sport teams greatly differ lol I always enjoy Robin's writings. Robin has a great talent and has the skill to get me rooting for a bear of all things. The love stories shared in the Bear tugged at my heartstrings and didn't shy away from the tough aspect of love and I appreciate that. Thank you again Robin for another humanizing depiction of our Native American people.

I loved the story of Ten Thunders finding his white father and learning of his son. Also the others of the tribe and their lives. Looking forward to the next book.
