Erica Jong, Marianne Williamson, Harold Kushner and many lesser-known contributors to this volume offer a heap of advice, urging readers not only to "keep a sense of adventure," (29) but to "get smart about the IRS" (151) and to "read the Torah." (225). Each of the chapters is brief, ranging from practical financial advice (129-164) to less concrete tips on spirituality and mindset. Religious scholar Robert Thurman says, "To understand the meaning of life, I think you have to confront and deal with the meaning of death

Don't even think about turning 50 without this book! A compilation of short articles, musings and reminiscences written by experts and celebrities from all walks of life on the subject of turning 50. Includes valuable information on important medical tests, estate planning, insurance strategies, as well as a healthy dose of poetry and humor. A ...those who want reassurance that 50 is the age at which you start reaping the benefits of your labors will find much to appreciate here. --Publishers Weekly, July 18, 2005 Helping baby boomers as they age has become a popular subject for writers who are often boomers themselves. The messages are usually upbeat and optimistic, ensuring readers that the best times are ahead. Editor Sellers commissioned experts like Rabbi Harold

Kushner, clothing designer Diane Von Furstenberg, and makeup artist Bobbi Brown to write essays dealing with attitude, appearance, fitness, career, money, and fun. Garrison Keillor tells readers to stop complaining, while Harold Bloom advises them to read the classics. Doctors discuss nutrition and life-saving procedures, while financial experts talk about investments. It's a great book to browse or read piecemeal. Highly recommended; sales of the book will be donated to cancer organizations. --Library Journal, September 15, 2005

The result is a collection of essays that are helpful, humorous and encouraging. In addition to Keillor, Orman and Von Furstenberg, the contributors include Rabbi Harold Kushner, former poet laureate Billy Collins, America's Cup winner Gary Jobson, beauty expert Bobbi Brown and financial advisor Bill Gross. The topics are diverse, but the reader is left with one very positive message by the end of the book, Sellers said. Accept and take care of yourself, put your affairs in order and the years that are ahead of you will be the best years of your life. --Atlanta Journal-Constitution, September 21, 2005

This book is really interesting & fun to read. Lots of fun things to look at with this milestone age

Starting reading it seems like it is full of good advice. May have to wait until I retire to finish reading. To busy with work I will need the 60 one by then.

I plan to continue to purchase for anyone I know who is turning 50

Very good price on a great gift for someone turning 50.

Purchased for my dad's 50th birthday, don't think he's done all the things but he got a kick out of the book. Update: Dad loved this so much, he held onto it for 3 years waiting for his sister to turn 50 and re-gifted it to her. He recommends it.

Was bought as a gift. The person who got this as a gift has provide very +ve feedback on this book and would highly recommend this book for everyone, even before fifty :-)

The book was a huge hit. My sister turned 50 and called me to say that there are some things she really need and want to do from the book. Yippie Yahoo. This was very affordable and well received gift.

Quality was great. Given as a gift for a 50th birthday gift and they loved it. it's fun, witty, and a good read. No complaints.
