Every couple of years I buy myself a quilt calendar that also includes the instructions on how to make the quilts. I've never actually followed through on sewing one of the quilts, despite the fact that a calendar-with-patterns is a good value in terms of money. (A buck per quilt pattern? That's not bad at all.) But I forgive myself; even if I don't make these quilts, they are very pretty and I would make a few of them... if I had enough time. Right. Sure I would. (Let's not talk about my pile of Unfinished Objects, okay?) The quilts shown in the calendar are bright and modern without too much emphasis on "scrappy" quilts or what I think of as "country" style (a la Thimbleberries); the quilt on the cover is representative. Just one applique quilt, if that matters to you. A color scheme all over the map, with a tendency towards blue (which is a good thing as my wall is blue). And if you ARE going to make any of these quilts, you'll appreciate that the instruction sheets are large and readable; they weigh more than the calendar in fact. As a calendar, the text is readable and the events are inclusive. Earth Day is listed as well as Easter, for instance. I like this one. I look forward to having it hang on my office wall all year.

I wanted something for my sewing room that reflected my love of quilting so I purchased this calendar. The images are very pretty and do just what I wanted. As a bonus, every pattern used in the calendar has a corresponding pattern included. However, the only thing that I didn't like is that the patterns are in a separate "booklet" that opens out into large sheets of unbound paper. A little chintzy. But I just put them with the rest of my magazines. Overall a nice little calendar.

I really liked this calendar. Even it is now outdated the Quilts in it is still worth while to see.

The Quilt Calendar (with all the patterns) is an annual purchase for me - and for gifts for my cut-up (quilting) friends. These treasures are saved from year to year and when I start a new quilt - that is where I start for ideas! THANKS

This is a great calendar. A different beautiful quilt for every month and all the pattern instructions. An awesome gift for the quilter in your life.

I have found the product to be excellent. Patterns are very detailed and accurate. Colour photos are extremely good. Have purchased this calendar before and will definitely be purchasing it again next year.

I buy these every year for my aunt that quilts and she loves to get them and see the new patterns. Fast shipping and great variety of calendars every year.

I purchase one of these quilt calendars every year. I've yet to be disappointed. This year was no exception. I'll be back next year.
