The Civilizations Of Africa: A History To 1800

Synopsis

Since its initial publication, The Civilizations of Africa has established itself as the most authoritative text available on early African history. Addressing the glaring lack of works concentrating on earlier African eras, Christopher Ehret's trailblazing book has been paired with histories of Africa since 1800 to build a full and well-rounded understanding of the roles of Africa's peoples in human history. Examining inventions and civilizations from 22,000 BCE to 1800 CE, Ehret explores the wide range of social and cultural as well as technological and economic change in Africa, relating all these facets of African history to developments in the rest of the world. This updated edition incorporates new research, as well as an extensive new selection of color images.

Challenging and innovative... thorough and masterful.... One hopes that Christopher Ehret has initiated a new trend in the writing of African history textbooks, one that challenges previously accepted chronologies and ideas and presents us with an interpretation that connects social, economic, political, and cultural history. (African Studies Review) Challenges historians to rethink how they teach the African past.... Ehret goes boldly where no writer of an African history textbook has ever gone before.... [The book] has convinced me teachers should stress the deep past, the past that produced the intellectual, cultural, and yes spiritual resources that are the bedrock hope of an Africa battered by the past few centuries. (International Journal of African Historical Studies) An authoritative and strikingly original overview of African history up to 1800, written at a level that will be accessible to entering college students. (Patrick Manning, Northeastern University, author of Migration in Modern World History, 1500–2000) With this text, Christopher Ehret provides a compelling account of early African history suitable for undergraduates and those without background in the field, updating the first edition (2002) with recent research.... Anyone who has taught a survey course about Africa knows that the sheer scale of the undertaking is a significant challenge, but Ehret's narrative moves back and forth easily between big-picture developments and close-to-the-ground details. (The International Journal of African Historical Studies)

Christopher Ehret is Professor of History Emeritus at the University of California, Los Angeles, and the author of An African Classical Age: Eastern and Southern Africa in World History, 1000 B.C. to A.D. 400 (Virginia).

An incredible introduction to the empires and nations of Africa which existed pre-colonization period. I had not realized that 500 year old empires had risen and fallen in Africa long before Europe felt the need to "improve" it.

This is not fiction and none of the questions about mood, plot, pace and character are applicable. The Civilizations of Africa is, I think, the best of the survey African history books. It suffers from the usual problem of the type: too much information to cover and at the same time from a problem specific to African history - there are huge lacunae, enormous areas unknown. The scholarship is good; the approach is thoughtful. Highly recommended.

I love this book

Awesome

History that is not found in US class rooms

It is a wonderful, I am going to share with my family and friends

First well written and well rounded story of the earliest periods of African History. Shines the light of research on an area previously fraught with speculation. Also debunks earlier fuzzy thinking on the topic.

It is a very good book for students and other tht wnat to know the history of Africa. I have used it in my course at th Stockhom University.
